MAWSS inducted six retirees into its Employee Hall of Fame for making a lasting contribution to the organization. From left are Riley Brenes on behalf of his late father David Brenes, Brenda F. Sigler, Johnnie B. Lash Jr, Isadore Williams and MAWSS Director Charles Hyland. Henry Bradley Jr. and the late Moses Wilson were not represented at the Aug. 23 induction. This year's class represents 160 years of service to MAWSS and the community.

The most important resource of any organization is its employees. Recognizing that fact, Mobile Area Water and Sewer System (MAWSS) honored six retirees with induction into its Employee Hall of Fame during a brief ceremony August 23, at MAWSS Park Forest Plaza.

Started in 2009, the program recognizes employees who made a lasting contribution to the organization. Inductees are nominated by current employees for exhibiting a strong work ethic, loyalty, good attitude and dedication. This year's inductees are Brenda F. Sigler, Johnnie B. Lash, Jr., Isadore Williams, Henry Bradley Jr. and the late David Brenes and Moses Wilson.

“These employees laid the foundation for a great organization that provides critical services to the community,” said MAWSS Director Charles Hyland. “Their dedication showed loyalty to the organization as well as to their fellow employees.”

This year's inductees represent 160 years of service. Since its inception, 62 retirees have been inducted to the Employee Hall of Fame representing 1,837 years of service to the community. The names of all the inductees are engraved on the Employee Hall of Fame plaque displayed in the Wesley James Operations Center at MAWSS Park Forest Plaza.
